PROJECT DESCRIPTION

The Tibetan Nuns Project supports seven nunneries in India. Ongoing maintenance of these complex institutions is very important. By keeping buildings in good condition, we can help avoid costly repairs in future. The climate of northern India, with its torrential monsoon rains, heat, occasional cold spells, and heavy snows in the north, has a big impact on the nunnery buildings.

At each nunnery we support, the nuns themselves do much of the work to help to maintain their nunneries, including cleaning, some painting and repairs, landscaping and so on. But institutions of this size, such as Dolma Ling Nunnery which is home to over 240 nuns and which has many buildings, need to be well maintained and have various upkeep activities like painting done on a regular basis.

Please help us maintain the nunneries by contributing to our Maintenance Fund.
