PROJECT DESCRIPTION

Shugsep Nunnery, now home to about 85 nuns, was built over 10 years ago. Unfortunately, the nunnery's septic system is leaking and needs to be repaired urgently.

The nunnery relies on septic tanks and septic fields to deal with sewage and grey water. The area experiences one of the heaviest monsoons in India. The torrential rains put huge stress on the septic system, causing the tanks to overflow. The nunnery is built on a hillside, further complicating matters. When the land becomes saturated, both the nunnery and neighboring village homes are affected, causing distress to everyone.

It is vital for the health of the nuns and their neighbors that the nunnery has a well-functioning septic system. Without urgent repairs, there is the very real danger of outbreaks of disease such as dysentery, cholera, typhoid, and hepatitis.

We urgently need your help to repair the septic system at Shugsep Nunnery before July 1 and the onset of the next monsoon.
